[The following text is extremely faint and largely illegible due to fading or damage.]

[The image shows a single palm leaf manuscript strip with handwritten text in Kannada script. The text is arranged in approximately 10 horizontal lines across the length of the leaf. There are two circular holes visible along the left edge, which were traditionally used for threading a cord to bind multiple leaves together into a book format. The ink is dark, and the leaf itself has a weathered, brownish appearance.]

This image shows a fragment of a palm-leaf manuscript. The leaf is dark brown, heavily worn, and has a large circular hole in the center. The text is arranged in several horizontal lines across the length of the leaf, written in a South Indian script, likely Grantha or Tamil. The script is finely inscribed and appears to be a form of classical South Indian writing. The fragment is irregularly shaped, with jagged edges, suggesting it is a piece from a larger leaf.

Handwritten text in Devanagari script on a palm leaf manuscript. The text is arranged in approximately 10 horizontal lines. A circular hole is visible on the left side of the leaf, used for binding multiple leaves together. The script is dark and appears to be a historical form of the language.

Handwritten text in Kannada script on a palm leaf manuscript. The text is arranged in approximately 10 horizontal lines. A circular hole is visible on the left side of the leaf, used for binding multiple leaves together. The script is a traditional form of Kannada, and the leaf shows signs of age and wear.

[illegible]

Handwritten text on a palm leaf manuscript, featuring multiple lines of script in an ancient South Asian language, likely Tamil. The leaf is dark brown and shows signs of wear, including a prominent circular hole near the center.

This image shows a fragment of a palm-leaf manuscript. The text is inscribed in a South Indian script, possibly Grantha or Tamil, using dark ink. The fragment is irregularly shaped with frayed edges and features a prominent circular hole. The text is arranged in several lines, with some characters appearing to be in a different script or dialect than others, possibly indicating a mix of languages or a specific dialect. The overall appearance is aged and weathered.
